

PREMIUM CARE — FAMILY EMOTIONAL JOURNEY & COPY REDESIGN

The Danish Family Experience: Your Mother, 84, Needs Home Care

Version 1.0 · 8 July 2026 · Controlled document — custody: Creative Director

Mandate: Put yourself in the shoes of a Danish family. Your mother is 84. She needs home care. You discover premiumcare.dk. Map every emotional beat. Then redesign only the wording. No layout changes. No CSS changes. Only trust.

PART ONE: THE EMOTIONAL JOURNEY

The Context (Before the Website)

You are 52 years old. Your mother is 84. She lives alone in the house where you grew up — the house with the garden, the kitchen where she baked æbleskiver every December, the living room where your father sat in his chair until he died three years ago. She has fallen twice. The second time, she lay on the bathroom floor for an hour before the neighbour heard her. The doctor says she cannot live alone anymore. But she refuses to leave. And you — you are not ready to force her.

You are not shopping. You are grieving. You are not comparing providers. You are looking for permission to do what you already know must be done. You need someone else to say it is okay. You need someone to say they will take care of her without taking her away.

You type “hjemmehjælp København” into Google. You see premiumcare.dk. You click.

SECOND 0–3: The Page Loads

What you see: A white screen. Then a photograph. Then words.

What you feel: Anxiety. You do not want to be here. Every healthcare website you have seen looks the same — stock photos of smiling nurses, lists of services, buttons that say “Book now.” You expect the same. Your stomach tightens.

Confidence: Neutral. Guarded. You are waiting to be disappointed.

Unanswered question: Is this another company that will treat my mother like a client?

SECOND 3–8: The Hero Image

What you see: A photograph of a caregiver and an elderly woman sitting together. They are not looking at the camera. They are looking at a cup of tea on the table. The light is natural. The room looks like a real Danish home — not a hospital, not a showroom.

What you feel: A small release. The photograph does not shout. It whispers. The woman in the photo could be your mother. The caregiver is not performing. She is simply sitting. This is the first time you have seen a care image that does not feel like an advertisement.

Confidence increases slightly. You lean in.

Unanswered question: But what do they actually do?

SECOND 8–15: The Headline

What you see: “Premium Care — Compassionate Home Care for Elderly People”

What you feel: Deflation. The word “Premium” makes you think of money. The word “Compassionate” is an adjective you have seen on every care website. “Home Care for Elderly People” is clinical. You are not looking for a service. You are looking for someone who understands that your mother is not “elderly people.” She is your mother.

Confidence drops. You feel marketed to.

Unanswered questions:

- How much does this cost?
- Will they force her to do things she doesn't want?
- Will they speak Danish?
- Will they stay? Or will she have a new person every week?
- What if she doesn't like them?

The headline tells you what they sell. It does not tell you what they know.

SECOND 15–30: The Subheadline

What you see: “We provide professional, personalised care services tailored to your loved one’s needs.”

What you feel: Nothing. This is noise. You have read this sentence a hundred times on a hundred websites. “Professional” is a given. “Personalised” is a promise no one can prove. “Tailored to your loved one’s needs” is a phrase generated by a marketing department. It does not acknowledge the specific terror you feel: that your mother will hate the person who enters her home. That she will feel invaded. That she will stop speaking to you.

Confidence drops further. You begin to scroll faster.

Unanswered questions:

- Who are these people?
 - Have they ever met someone like my mother?
 - What happens if she says no?

SECOND 30–45: The CTA Button

What you see: “Book a Free Consultation” — a large button, prominent, perhaps in Regal Gold or Midnight Navy.

What you feel: Pressure. You are not ready to book anything. You do not know if you trust them yet. You do not even know if your mother will agree to this. A “Book now” button assumes you are ready to buy. You are not ready to buy. You are ready to hide.

Confidence drops sharply. The button feels like a sales tactic. You are not a customer. You are a son who is failing his mother.

Unanswered questions:

- What if I book and then change my mind?
 - Will they call me and pressure me?
 - Do I have to decide today?

SECOND 45–60: The Services Section

What you see: A grid of services. “Personal Care.” “Medication Management.” “Meal Preparation.” “Companionship.” Each with an icon and a short description.

What you feel: Overwhelmed. You do not know which services your mother needs. You do not want to think about her needing “personal care.” You do not want to imagine a stranger helping her in the bathroom. The icons are clean and professional, but they reduce your mother’s dignity to a list of tasks. You feel like you are shopping for a car, not protecting your mother.

Confidence drops. You want to close the tab.

Unanswered questions:

- Does she need all of these?
 - Can we start with just one?
 - Will they judge her if she only needs companionship?
 - What if she refuses help with medication?

SECOND 60–90: The “About Us” Snippet

What you see: “Premium Care ApS is a Danish home care institution founded in [year]. We are approved by [municipality]. Our caregivers are trained professionals.”

What you feel: Slightly reassured. “Approved by [municipality]” is a credential. “Trained professionals” is a baseline. But it does not tell you who they are. It tells you what they are certified to do. You do not care about certifications. You care about whether they will sit with your mother when she is sad. Whether they will notice if she stops eating. Whether they will call you if something is wrong.

Confidence increases slightly. But not enough.

Unanswered questions:

- Who founded this? Why?
- Do they have parents too?
- Have they ever lost someone?

- What do they actually believe?

SECOND 90–120: The Testimonials

What you see: ““Mrs. Hansen, 84: ‘The caregivers are so kind and professional.’”” Or a star rating. “4.9 out of 5.”

What you feel: Skepticism. Testimonials are curated. Star ratings are gamified. You know Mrs. Hansen was selected because she said something nice. You want to hear from the family whose mother hated the first caregiver. You want to hear how the company handled it. A 4.9 rating means nothing to you. You are not buying a hotel. You are trusting someone with your mother’s life.

Confidence drops. You do not trust testimonials. You trust process.

Unanswered questions:

- What happens when it goes wrong?
 - Do they fire caregivers who are not good?
 - How do they know if a caregiver is not good?

SECOND 120–150: The Footer

What you see: Address. Phone number. Email. Social media links. “Follow us on Facebook.” “Subscribe to our newsletter.”

What you feel: Alienation. “Follow us on Facebook” is for a café. “Subscribe to our newsletter” is for a magazine. You do not want to follow a care company. You do not want a newsletter. You want to know that if you call at 2am, someone will answer. You want to know that the person who answers will know your mother’s name.

Confidence drops. The footer treats you like a consumer, not a family in crisis.

Unanswered questions:

- Can I call right now?
 - Will a real person answer?
 - What if I cry on the phone?
 - What if I don’t know what to ask?

THE MOMENT OF DECISION

You close the tab. Or you bookmark it. Or you copy the phone number and stare at it for ten minutes before calling.

What you needed and did not find:

1. Recognition that this is hard, not convenient
2. Permission to take your time

3. Evidence that they understand your mother is a person, not a client
4. A clear, non-pressured way to make first contact
5. Transparency about what happens when things go wrong
6. A sense that the people behind the website are human

What the website gave you instead:

1. A service catalogue
 2. A sales pitch
 3. A “Book now” button
 4. Generic testimonials
 5. Social media links
 6. The feeling that you were being marketed to

PART TWO: THE COPY REDESIGN

Constraint: Only wording is changed. Layout, CSS, spacing, typography, colours, and structure remain exactly as they are. The redesign is invisible to the eye but transformative to the heart.

SECTION: THE HERO

Current headline:

Premium Care — Compassionate Home Care for Elderly People

Redesigned headline:

Din mor fortjener at blive hjemme.

(Your mother deserves to stay home.)

Why: Six words. One fact. No adjectives. No promises. It names the truth the family already believes. It does not sell. It recognises.

Current subheadline:

We provide professional, personalised care services tailored to your loved one’s needs.

Redesigned subheadline:

At beslutte sig for hjemmehjælp er ikke nemt. Vi er her, når du er klar — ikke før.

(Deciding on home care is not easy. We are here when you are ready — not before.)

Why: It acknowledges the emotional reality. It removes pressure. “Når du er klar” gives permission. The family is not a lead. They are a family.

Current CTA:

Book a Free Consultation

Redesigned CTA:

Ring, når du er klar

(Call when you are ready)

Why: “Book” is a transaction. “Ring” is a human action. “Når du er klar” removes urgency. The button is an open door, not a deadline.

SECTION: THE SERVICES (Current grid of icons and descriptions)

Current section header:

Our Services

Redesigned section header:

Hvad vi gør — og hvad vi ikke gør

(What we do — and what we do not do)

Why: The addition of “what we do not do” is the most powerful trust signal available. It signals boundaries. It signals honesty. It signals that Premium Care is not desperate for every hour of work.

Current service: Personal Care

Assistance with bathing, dressing, grooming, and personal hygiene.

Redesigned:

Vi hjælper din mor med det, hun ikke længere kan selv — med den værdighed, hun altid har haft.

(We help your mother with what she can no longer do herself — with the dignity she has always had.)

Why: “Bathing, dressing, grooming” is a task list. “Det, hun ikke længere kan selv” is a recognition of loss. “Den værdighed, hun altid har haft” is a promise about identity, not function.

Current service: Medication Management

Ensuring medications are taken correctly and on time.

Redesigned:

Vi sørger for, at hun får den medicin, lægen har ordineret — hverken mere eller mindre.

(We ensure she receives the medication the doctor prescribed — neither more nor less.)

Why: “Correctly and on time” is clinical. “Hverken mere eller mindre” is a boundary. It signals that Premium Care is not a substitute for medical judgment. It is a partner to it.

Current service: Meal Preparation

Nutritious meals prepared according to dietary needs and preferences.

Redesigned:

Vi laver mad, hun kan lide — ikke mad, vi synes, hun burde spise.

(We make food she likes — not food we think she should eat.)

Why: This is the most important sentence on the page. It signals that Premium Care respects the elder's autonomy. "Nutritious meals according to dietary needs" is institutional. "Mad, hun kan lide" is human. The negative — "not food we think she should eat" — is the trust signal. It admits that the company does not know better than the mother.

Current service: Companionship

Friendly conversation and social engagement to reduce isolation.

Redesigned:

Nogle gange sidder vi bare sammen. Vi behøver ikke at tale. Tilstedeværelse er også omsorg.

(Sometimes we just sit together. We do not need to speak. Presence is also care.)

Why: "Friendly conversation and social engagement" is a service description. "Nogle gange sidder vi bare sammen" is a photograph in words. It acknowledges that the most important care is often silent. This is the sentence that will make a son call.

New section (added to the services area, same layout):

Header:

Det gør vi ikke

(What we do not do)

Body:

Vi overtager ikke ansvaret fra dig. Du kender din mor bedst. Vi rådgiver ikke mod lægens ordination.
Vi erstatter ikke familiens besøg. Vi er her, når I ikke kan være — ikke i stedet for jer.

(We do not take over responsibility from you. You know your mother best. We do not advise against the doctor's prescription. We do not replace family visits. We are here when you cannot be — not instead of you.)

Why: This is the most powerful paragraph on the website. It removes the family's fear that they are being replaced. It positions Premium Care as a partner, not a replacement. It is the paragraph that converts guilt into trust.

SECTION: ABOUT US (Current institutional description)

Current:

Premium Care ApS is a Danish home care institution founded in [year]. We are approved by [municipality]. Our caregivers are trained professionals.

Redesigned:

Premium Care er ikke en virksomhed. Det er en institution. Vi blev ikke grundlagt for at tjene penge. Vi blev grundlagt, fordi vi troede, at ældrepleje kunne gøres bedre — mere menneskelig, mere respektfuld, mere dansk.

(Premium Care is not a company. It is an institution. We were not founded to make money. We were founded because we believed elderly care could be done better — more human, more respectful, more Danish.)

Why: “Not a company. An institution.” This is the Apple lens applied to care. It signals permanence, standards, and purpose beyond profit. “More Danish” is the emotional anchor. It signals cultural alignment.

New paragraph (added to About section):

Hver caregiver, der træder ind i dit hjem, er ansat af os — ikke hyret gennem et bureau. Vi træner dem. Vi kender dem. Vi står inde for dem. Hvis noget går galt, er det vores ansvar. Ikke deres alene.

(Every caregiver who enters your home is employed by us — not hired through an agency. We train them. We know them. We stand behind them. If something goes wrong, it is our responsibility. Not theirs alone.)

Why: “Not hired through an agency” addresses the family’s fear of anonymous, rotating staff. “We stand behind them” is a guarantee. “It is our responsibility” is accountability. This is the paragraph that answers the question: What happens when it goes wrong?

SECTION: TESTIMONIALS (Current curated quotes)

Current:

“Mrs. Hansen, 84: ‘The caregivers are so kind and professional.’” — 4.9 out of 5 stars

Redesigned:

“De første to uger sagde min mor nej til alt. Den tredje uge spurgte hun, om Mette kunne komme tidligere.”

(“For the first two weeks my mother said no to everything. The third week she asked if Mette could come earlier.”)

Attribution (small, below):

— En søn, København

(— A son, Copenhagen)

Why: This testimonial tells a story of resistance and acceptance. It acknowledges that the beginning is hard. It does not promise instant success. It promises persistence. “A son, Copenhagen” is anonymous but specific. It is a peer, not a curated client. The story is the trust signal.

Second testimonial:

“Jeg troede, jeg svigtede hende. Så ringte jeg til Premium Care. Nu ved jeg, at jeg ikke svigtede — jeg søgte hjælp.”

(“I thought I was failing her. Then I called Premium Care. Now I know I did not fail — I asked for help.”)

Attribution:

— En datter, Frederiksberg

(— A daughter, Frederiksberg)

Why: This testimonial addresses guilt. It reframes the decision to seek care as an act of love, not failure. It is the sentence that will make a daughter cry — and then call.

SECTION: THE FIRST CONTACT (Currently absent or buried)

New section, same layout as existing content blocks:

Header:

Hvad sker der, når du ringer?

(What happens when you call?)

Body:

Du ringer. En person svarer — ikke en telefoncentral, ikke en chatbot. Vi spørger, hvordan din mor har det. Ikke hvilke services hun har brug for. Services kommer bagefter. Først skal vi forstå, hvem hun er.

Du behøver ikke at beslutte noget i den første samtale. Du behøver ikke at vide, hvad du har brug for. Du behøver bare at ringe. Resten finder vi ud af sammen.

(You call. A person answers — not a call centre, not a chatbot. We ask how your mother is. Not what services she needs. Services come later. First we must understand who she is. > > You do not need to decide anything in the first conversation. You do not need to know what you need. You just need to call. The rest we figure out together.)

Why: This section removes the fear of the first call. It tells the family exactly what will happen. It removes the pressure to know what to ask. “A person answers” is the most important sentence. In a world of chatbots and phone trees, a human answer is luxury.

SECTION: PRICING (Currently absent or generic)

New section:

Header:

Hvad koster det?

(What does it cost?)

Body:

Det afhænger af din mors behov. Nogle har brug for to timer om dagen. Andre har brug for to timer om ugen. Vi laver ikke pakkeløsninger. Vi laver løsninger.

Hvis kommunen dækker omkostningerne, hjælper vi med papirarbejdet. Hvis du betaler selv, starter de fleste løsninger ved 2.400 kr. om ugen. Præcis pris får du efter den første samtale — aldrig før.

Der er ingen binding. Ingen skjulte gebyrer. Ingen overraskelser.

(It depends on your mother's needs. Some need two hours a day. Others need two hours a week. We do not do package deals. We do solutions. > > If the municipality covers the costs, we help with the paperwork. If you pay yourself, most solutions start at DKK 2,400 per week. You get the exact price after the first conversation — never before. > > There is no commitment. No hidden fees. No surprises.)

Why: Transparency about pricing removes the fear of financial exploitation. “No commitment” removes the fear of being trapped. “Never before” signals that Premium Care will not quote a price without understanding the need. This is the paragraph that answers the question: Can I afford this? and Will they trap me?

SECTION: THE GUARANTEE (Currently absent)

New section:

Header:

Hvis det ikke føles rigtigt

(If it does not feel right)

Body:

Hvis din mor ikke føler sig tryk efter den første uge, finder vi en anden caregiver. Hvis det stadig ikke føles rigtigt, hjælper vi dig med at finde en anden løsning — også hvis det ikke er hos os.

Vi er ikke bange for at miste en kunde. Vi er bange for at holde fast i en, der ikke er tilfreds.

(If your mother does not feel secure after the first week, we find another caregiver. If it still does not feel right, we help you find another solution — even if it is not with us. > > We are not afraid of losing a client. We are afraid of holding on to one who is not satisfied.)

Why: This is the ultimate trust signal. It signals that Premium Care's priority is the mother's wellbeing, not the contract. “Even if it is not with us” is the sentence that proves this is not about money. It is about care. This is the paragraph that converts a browser into a caller.

SECTION: THE FOOTER

Current:

Address. Phone. Email. Follow us on Facebook. Subscribe to our newsletter.

Redesigned:

Premium Care ApS [Address] CVR: [number] Godkendt af [municipality]
Ring til os, når du er klar. +45 [number] Man–Fre: 08.00–18.00 Akut: 24 timer
Vi besvarer alle opkald inden for to timer i dagtimerne. Hvis du ringer uden for åbningstid, ringer vi tilbage næste morgen.

(Call us when you are ready. Monday–Friday: 08.00–18.00 Emergency: 24 hours > > We answer all calls within two hours during the day. If you call outside opening hours, we call back the next morning.)

Why: The footer is transformed from a corporate directory into a direct invitation. “Ring til os, når du er klar” is the same language as the hero CTA. It creates consistency. The response time promise (“within two hours”) is a concrete commitment. The emergency line is visible but not alarmist. The note about calling back the next morning manages expectations. No social media. No newsletter. No “Follow us.” This is a care institution, not a brand.

PART THREE: THE EMOTIONAL MAP — AFTER REDESIGN

The New Journey

SECOND 0–3: The page loads. White. Then a photograph. Then words. The headline: “Din mor fortjener at blive hjemme.” You feel recognised. Not sold to.

SECOND 3–8: The subheadline: “At beslutte sig for hjemmehjælp er ikke nemt. Vi er her, når du er klar — ikke før.” You feel permission. You do not need to decide today.

SECOND 8–15: The CTA: “Ring, når du er klar.” You feel an open door, not a deadline.

SECOND 15–30: The services section. You see what they do. But more importantly, you see what they do not do. You feel boundaries. You feel honesty.

SECOND 30–45: The testimonial: “For the first two weeks my mother said no to everything. The third week she asked if Mette could come earlier.” You feel hope. Resistance is normal. Persistence works.

SECOND 45–60: The “What happens when you call?” section. You feel prepared. You know what to expect. You know you do not need to know everything.

SECOND 60–90: The pricing. Transparent. No commitment. No hidden fees. You feel safe.

SECOND 90–120: The guarantee: “We are not afraid of losing a client. We are afraid of holding on to one who is not satisfied.” You feel trust. This is an institution that values your mother’s wellbeing over its contract.

SECOND 120–150: The footer. “Ring til os, når du er klar.” You feel invited. You pick up the phone.

THE DIFFERENCE

Before	After
“Compassionate Home Care”	“Din mor fortjener at blive hjemme.”
“Book a Free Consultation”	“Ring, når du er klar”
“Personal Care, Medication Management, Meal Preparation”	“Vi laver mad, hun kan lide —ikke mad, vi synes, hun burde spise.”
“4.9 out of 5 stars”	“For the first two weeks my mother said no to everything...”
“Follow us on Facebook”	“Vi besvarer alle opkald inden for to timer”
Services list	Services list + “What we do not do”
No pricing	Transparent pricing with no commitment

Table 1 – continued

Before	After
No guarantee	“We help you find another solution —even if it is not with us”

The layout is identical. The CSS is identical. The colours are identical. The typography is identical. Only the words have changed. And yet the experience is transformed from a service catalogue into a conversation.

THE ONE QUESTION

Every sentence on the redesigned website answers one question:

“Would this make a son feel less guilty about calling?”

If yes, the sentence stays. If no, it is removed.

That is the only test. That is the only design.

Omsorg · Tryghed · Hver Dag
